“MEETING A MATE AND MARRYING: PART 1” BY: GLENN B. RAMSEY

There are many concerns that Christian parents have about their children. Their physical health and well-being is paramount (1 Tim. 5:8). Their mental and social developments are very important (Luke 2:52). But the spiritual well-being of the children should be of the greatest concern (Eph. 6:4).

It is because of this concern that Christian parents should be active in teaching their sons and daughters the great importance of selecting the proper mate. Of equal concern, the Christian parents work to instill in their children the importance of “marrying for life.” In all of these things parents realize that their children have their own free will and may or may not follow the wisdom of their Father and Mother. This should NOT keep the parents from doing all that is within their power to influence the children to do right and be right in these life decisions.

It has been, for many years, the thinking of Christian parents that the good influence of Christian schools, along with the fact that Christian young people attend these schools, should help their children in these important decisions. Indeed, if Christian young people associate together in their young years the probability is that they will marry Christians. This writer believes that every Christian parent should insist with all his/her might that the young man or woman marry one who is a Christian. What could be better? Much could be worse.

This does NOT mean that when a boy meets and marries a Christian girl that she will remain faithful to the Lord. But the conditions are right for a strong Christian life in this arrangement. Other arrangements are fraught with danger.
