"And when they were come into the house, they saw the young child with Mary his mother, and fell down, and worshipped him: and when they had opened their treasures, they presented unto him gifts; gold, and frankincense, and myrrh (Matthew 2:11)."

“PREACHING TO A KING: PART 1” BY: DAVID HILL

Ever considered what it would be like to preach to a king? Some have preached to presidents. Some church historians believe Abraham Lincoln heard several gospel sermons. Brother B. C. Goodpasture preached with President Lyndon Johnson in the audience, and a preacher should be prepared to speak the word of God before kings, presidents, all. The history book of the New Testament records the apostle Paul’s sermon delivered before King Herod Agrippa (Acts 26). It’s thrilling to think about, and wouldn’t you have liked to have heard it?

The beloved apostle began his message very respectfully, expressing appreciation and respect for his audience, appealing “hear me patiently” (Acts 26:2-3). He asserted confidently that his life had been well-known by the Jews. He had been very religious, a devout Pharisee of the “strictest sect” (v 5). In that position he had persecuted Christians, something he never seemed to get over (I Tim. 1:15). His life was well-known to the Jews.

His life was well-known to God (Acts 26:13-19). The Lord had spoken to him on the road to Damascus (Acts 9). He had been called to be a minister of things seen to the Gentiles. He had done his work in good conscience (Acts 24:16), thus as he had heard and observed the persecution of Christians, his conscience had begun to goad him (Acts 26:14). Once converted to Christ he had been obedient to “the heavenly vision” (v 19). A life of proven faithfulness to the Lord is a life well-known to God.

Paul was well-known to Christians both before and after his conversion (vv 20-23). Sadly, he had been well-known for his persecution (Acts 9:26, 26:11). With kind exhortation of Barnabas, he was eventually accepted as a Christian by Christians and able to declare the prophecy of God fulfilled (I Cor. 2:2). He had labored long, preaching the resurrected Savior (Acts 17:31; I Cor. 15), well-known to Jews and Christians alike for his preaching the gospel is for all—including Gentiles. It’s doubtful another of his generation was more devout in proclaiming the gospel of Christ, and his devotion to Christ made him well-known to Christians.
