“THE PERILS OF TRAVEL IN ANCIENT ROME”

BY: BILL BOYD

The apostle Paul spoke of being:

“In journeyings often...” The peace Rome brutally imposed on the ancient Mediterranean world and the roads they built to facilitate the movement of their armies made travel possible, but in 2 Corinthians 11:25-27, Paul describes the perils of civilian travel in those times.

“In perils of waters...” There were rivers to ford and flooded roads in the lowlands.

“In perils of robbers...” Travelers would carry money with them for their journey and highwaymen watched for the vulnerable along the byways.

“In perils by mine own countrymen...” Many of the Jews hated Paul after his conversion to Christianity and some of them follow Paul to stir up strife.

“In perils by the heathen...” It was the heathen who had Paul arrested, imprisoned, and beaten. Once they stoned him and left him for dead.

“In perils in the city...” They would often be at the mercy of strangers and being in unfamiliar surroundings they would be easy prey for those who would take advantage of them.

“In perils in the wilderness...” They would be far from help in the open land and countryside between the cities where there was the possibility of encounters with wild beast.

“In perils in the sea...” Travel by sea was the most efficient, but the destinations were limited, and the uncertainty of the weather made such travel hazardous. Paul said, “Thrice was I shipwrecked.” “A night and a day I have spent in the deep.” And this was before his ill-fated voyage to Rome.

“In perils among false brethren...” Faithful preachers who have suffered from the slanders and ill treatment of false brethren can tell you that these are the most heartbreaking perils of them all.

“In weariness and painfulness...” Walking those rough roads for hundreds of miles would leave them weary, and the painfulness would include both the wear on the body and the suffering of sickness.

“In watching’s often...” There is a mental stress of continually being on guard.

“In hunger and thirst, in fastings often...” No doubt it was difficult to assure adequate provisions for long days of physical exertion down long roads.

BIBLE SCHOOL CORNER

Bible Study Times!

Please remember our Bible Study Classes! These are great times to study God’s Word! We have them each week at 10:00 AM on Sunday and at 7:00 PM on Wednesday.

“In cold and nakedness...” Their nakedness refers to their lack of adequate clothing against the elements, leaving them rain soaked and exposed to chilling winds.

We are humbled by those who suffered that we might hear the Gospel. We should remember them with thanksgiving when we are tempted to whine over our light trials.
